VISIT ONE OF THE AGRICULTURAL SEMINARS TAKING PLACE AT THE GREAT YORKSHIRE SHOW 2017

Agriculture is at the heart of the Great Yorkshire Show and this is especially true with the agricultural seminars taking place at the Great Yorkshire Show 2017.

The seminars will return to the seminar room in Hall 1 with a packed programme over the three days, showcasing agriculture and innovation.

All the talks are free to attend and this year's programme has something for everyone involved in the rural community. A taster of who will be available is below:

Andersons Northern will be holding a Brexit debate giving you the chance to discuss the opportunities as well as risk for your farm business.

Barclay's Bank will be talking about why falling victim to a cyber fraud attack can result in major financial losses for a business.

Farmer Scientist Network will be holding a talk and demonstrations of Drone Technology and Precision Agriculture.

Crombie Wilkinson Solicitors will be talking about taking the taboo out of succession planning and be proactive for the farm business.

Find out about farm diversification and funding options with George F White.

The Yorkshire Rural Support Network (YRSN) will be calling all farmers at the show to come along for a free health check and chat with farmer-friendly nurses and Macmillan cancer support workers.

Join the YRSN Women In Farming for their 'Keep calm and mind your own business - how to remain sane in the early days' talk.

We will also have speakers from Agri-food Yorkshire, N8 AgriFood, an update on the threat in the UK from Asian Hornets and much more.

Book your place at any of the free events as part of the seminar programme by visiting:
